U. S. Cannot Compete With Soviet Discipline

By Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON.--The dismay, the chagrin, the anger, and, yes, the sympathy so evident in the crowded hearing room as young Charles Van Doren testified are the emotions that will be felt everywhere with the climax of this national tragedy.

It is not less than that. As with everything that happens on the American stage, this cannot help but have international implications.

The enemies of America around the world, and the roster is by no means limited to the Communists, will find it useful ammunition. Here was a brilliant young intellectual, a teacher, talented in various fields, coming of a family of scholars and writers. Yet he lent himself to a conspiracy to debase all these values for a "show" and for the rich rewards that came to him from that "show."

Foreign observers here are interpreting this as another proof of the confusion of intellectual and moral values in America. For our friends it is a source of great sorrow. They can say it is only a small incident which does not vitiate the broad attainments of American learning and scholarship in the thousands of educational institutions across the country.

But they know the uses that will be made of it by enemies of America on the left and right. It will be held up as another bit of evidence that despite all the protestations about spiritual values, so often articulated by President Eisenhower, the values of the mind and the spirit take second place to money.

This reporter recalls the atmosphere on the special train with Premier Khrushchev on the day after the unhappy episode in Hollywood. The can-can dance had shocked the Khrushchev party. American officials traveling with the Premier knew full well the use which he could make of this piece of crudity. It remained, however, for one of the European newspaper correspondents, deeply anti-Communist and extremely knowledgeable about the Communist bloc, to sum up the damage.

"You cannot know how this has harmed intellectuals and artists in the Soviet bloc who are struggling for freedom of expression," he said. "They believe in it so much and in what it has achieved in the West that they risk much for it."

"Now Khrushchev can say to them: 'What, you want to be like the West? You say you want freedom? Well, I have seen it at firsthand as you have not, and it is vulgar and cheap.'"

The Russian propaganda mill is currently taking a moderate line on the United States. It can, of course, shift gears and come back with the old virulence. Little imagination is required to appreciate what could be done with the bonanza of the rigged quiz shows. In any event, whether with or without propaganda booster this news is being reported around the world.

The general feeling in the committee room and among committee members was one of relief after Van Doren told all. He had so clearly gone through a fearful ordeal. Perhaps the dominant emotion was one of sympathy with the realization that he had been sorely tempted.

But within the committee there was also the feeling that while he had gone a long way in making a full confession he had not gone far enough. How does he propose to make up for what he has done, it was being asked when he had concluded his trial by public humiliation. Having received so many benefits from the free society in which he grew up and having in effect betrayed that society, does he not now owe a debt above and beyond the law and its possible penalties. These are questions in the minds of Congressmen seriously concerned over the TV revelations.

In this era of flush prosperity when the emphasis in government is on economy and cutting the corners frank speaking is comparatively rare. But the other day in a speech here Professor George F. Kennan summed up the American dilemma in words that encompass many phenomena, among them perhaps the Van Doren tragedy:

"If you ask me -- as a historian let us say -- whether a country in the state this country is in today, with no highly developed sense of national purpose, with the overwhelming accent of life on personal comfort and amusement, with a dearth of public services and a surfeit of privately sold gadgetry, with a chaotic transportation system, with its great urban areas being gradually disintegrated by the headlong switch to motor transportation, with an educational system where quality has been extensively sacrificed to quantity, and with insufficient social discipline even to keep its major industries functioning without grievous interruptions -- if you ask me whether such a country has, over the long run, good chances of competing with a purposeful, serious and disciplined society such as that of the Soviet Union, I must say that the answer is 'no.'"

STRANGE SIGHT, Goblins, ghosts and goggle-eyed spectators lined the streets near South Street School last Friday as the youngsters made their annual parade to Schantz st. where they have entertained an invalid for years. Accompanied by their teachers, the children always have a gay time parading and upon their return to the school Halloween goodies are waiting. OH! Those ugly faces!

By Bob Walsh

NOWHERE TO HIDE

If television turns its back on Van Doren it is completely hypocritical. Van Doren is as guilty as they come, but he is being made the goat at great personal loss, while the industries which benefitted through his act and encouraged it smugly talk of letting him go.

It would require courage on the part of both the television industry and Van Doren to face the lights together, but if it were handled correctly a great amount of good might evolve. Television is saturated with bad and good guys on most of its so-called entertainment programs, and many times it makes much ado about the character who is a victim of circumstances, but atones, and is given a chance to make good.

Television should study its own story lessons.

We are not condoning Van Doren's action. We think they were deplorable. But he is a mighty small part of this television mess, and he enjoys a very sympathetic following which would applaud a concerted effort involving himself and television to set the course straight.

Van Doren as the principal character in an avowed effort to do something positive about correcting television wrongs might meet with wide approval and a large supporting audience. It is the kind of moral courage that often is appreciated by more people than we realize and too seldom attempted.

If Van Doren is as intelligent as he is rated, and as millions honestly believe, he will not starve. But perhaps he and the industry which used him could do something bigger than make a living.

TV IS EDUCATIONAL

We cannot understand these people who constantly lament the lack of educational programs on television. (Which suggests we cannot understand ourself. And that is the most understandable comment we have made this year.)

It is, too, educational!

Twice within the past month we have seen careful demonstrations of how you open a window in the black of night without making a sound. The glass is cut, does not fall shattering to the floor, and comes out so neatly. All ambitious young ranch-house, floor men must have gained greatly through these skilled exhibitions and the price of insurance on the stainless steel cutlery can be expected to inflate rapidly as the newly gained skill is put into active use.

Then there is that poke in the belly. We always have wasted our time, knuckles, and steam on the area just above our objective's neckline. This probably explains why so many have blinked once or twice and have shown no inclination to collapse in a helpless heap at our noble feet.

You start the blow from some orbiting point near the back of your neck and bring the fist into a portion of the anatomy that has much to do with the digestive procedure, or perhaps one or two of the functions that immediately follow.

If the fellow violently objects to your arcing a fist through these more tender portions there is a very efficient method of outmaneuvering his uncooperative actions. Let a friend (preferably yours) hold his arms.

And Tom Sawyer painted fences?

We hasten to note here that the potential object of your mayhem might turn on your friend and refuse to allow his arms to be pinned. This offers you a jolly opportunity to slug him in such homicidally suited areas as the base of his brain or the tip of his spine.

You understand, of course, that this is a very elementary course and to become eligible for a D.D.D. degree (doctor of devine devastation.. or is it devine doctor of demobilization) you must sit through a full season of Diamond, Gunn, Bounty Hunter, et al.

Then you will really cool 'em, man... really cool 'em.

Of course this is just a little maddening to us because we have discovered this free course too late in life. The craze today is the juvenile delinquent. Adult delinquents are passe.

And that is Van Doren's problem. He could have put his foot through Richard Diamond's mouth and if he had come away with his leg the networks would have found him regular employment. But he just was naughty with his brains, and this is inexcusable, even if it does sell cosmetics, make women beautiful, and put mink coats on tv executives' companions.

We suggest that Van Doren buy a glass cutter, a mite of adhesive tape, and cut himself a hole in the right window. He might be able to pocket the right answers to What's My Line. Then he'd know what to do.

DRUG CLAIMS ATTACKED BY MEDICAL GROUPS

In Wednesday's edition of this column we revealed a type of publicity coming across the editor's desk in which it was claimed doctors were dependent on the advertising done by drug firms for information concerning new medicines. We attempted to debunk this.

In this week's issue of "Between The Lines" several efforts by groups are reported. In each case the advertising of drug companies was involved. Let's see what the publication reported.

Under the heading, Drug Corporation Racketeering, the item read: "REDUCING" PILLS: A recent report in the Journal of the American Medical Association reveals a multi-million dollar racket in remedies widely advertised as effective in controlling or reducing weight. The chemical that is so widely promoted as an agent in many "no diet" "no prescription" tablets is called phenylpropanolamine.

Three prominent drug corporations involved in this racketeering have so far had their names protected. Tests made on 19 patients reveal that the drug has no effect on weight conditions.

It is estimated that $100 million a year is spent for weight control purposes, most of which goes for worthless reducing pills and other drugs for which fraudulent claims are made by leading drug manufacturers. The medical scientists conducting the tests were directed by Dr. J. F. Fazekas of the District of Columbia General Hospital.

COLD "CURES": The American Medical Assn.'s Council on Foods and Nutrition has also courageously denounced some of the large drug corporations by name for their exploitation of the public in marketing worthless or next to worthless panaceas for the common cold. In 1955 a substance known as the Citroid Compound was advertised by Clayton Laboratories, a division of the Grove Chemical Company, makers of Bromo-Quinine.

Full page newspaper ads introduced the medicine with a blurb labelled "An open letter to doctors in (name of city): Announcing medicine's newest weapon for control of colds." The ad played up such statements as "New Anti-Virus Factor" and "Find Relief in 24 Hours" claiming that hundreds of tests made among industrial workers proved that "complete relief came with the use of Citroid Compounds." Other ads claimed that 18 years research led to the discovery of medicine's newest weapon for control of colds -- "Citroid Compounds."

Some $2 million were spent by Grove for the first year's advertising campaign. But the American Medical Association and the National Better Business Bureau both have announced that there is no evidence on record of research materials, as claimed, that the patent compound known as Citroid contained anything of significance for the common cold.

The AMA reported that the Citroid bioflavonoid compounds "have no or little value for the treatment of disease . . . no significant effect, palliative or otherwise on colds."

TOOTH PASTE CLAIMS: Over $25 million is spent annually to advertise the 12 leading toothpastes. Doctor S. Pearlman, representing the American Dental Association, appeared before a subcommittee in Congress and one by one denounced the claims of such highly advertised products as Gleem with GL-70 (Proctor and Gamble), Stripe with Hexachlorophene (Lever Brothers), Brisk (Colgate-Palmolive).

All were torpedoed by such statements as "no evidence of beneficial effects," "contrary to all known dental practice." Those pastes that recommend that one brushing in the morning protects the teeth all day are "a fraudulent claim that discourages sound dental practice." For another, "this ad is grossly misleading and inherently harmful."

We repeat again. See your doctor or dentist, follow their advice, and you will save trouble and money.

EXPERIENCED MEN. Left to right are Elwood Fry, general manager, Henry Fasenmyer, production manager, and Stanley Besse, sales manager, of the new Superior Recapping Co., located opposite the Warren Concrete Products Co. on Warren's west side. Mr. Fry and Mr. Fasenmyer started the Warren Concrete company in 1946 and worked at that place until 1956 when they became active in the Septic Tank Machine Corp. which has branches in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Indiana. Mr. Besse has been associated with Montgomery Wards' tire department for nearly 20 years.

Superior will be distributors of General tires and batteries and McCreary tires and tubes. The firm is employing the Bandag cold processing system for the recapping of passenger car and truck tires.

THE PLANT. The new Superior Recapping Co. on the west side is already making plans for the fall rush on winter tires. They handle a complete line of General and McCreary tires for passenger cars and trucks. The firm has a fully equipped service department and five service trucks on the road. The Bandag recapping process used by Superior is guaranteed for 45,000 miles and is a low-cost operation. The method boasts a controlled pressure while curing the tread and the curing process takes place before the tread is applied to the tire.

In Brief

STOLEN AUTO RECOVERED. Aided by Police Chief Steve Hoden, of Sheffield, the local police were able to recover the car owned by Morris Shulman which was stolen last Friday afternoon around 3:30 p. m. from the front of the Shulman residence.

A 15-year old Sheffield lad was held responsible for stealing the auto after being interrogated by the Warren police. He was hitchhiking home when he came upon the auto and made off with it. When officials recovered the car they found it slightly damaged and learned from the boy that he had intentions of painting the auto to avoid discovery. The boy has had a similar charge against him previously.

NEAR AGREEMENT. Phyllis J. Yelvington, of Daytona Beach, Fla., was taken into custody by local police last week end on a charge of contempt of court issued from the Eighth District Court of Deland, Fla. The woman fled from the town with her two children, Robert 7, and Susan 2, when court action was taken as to the proper custody of the two children.

Thursday it was learned that Mrs. Yelvington, with the help of a local attorney and the district attorney, is now near settlement of the case with the court charges against her being dropped.

WEDNESDAY MISHAP. Wednesday afternoon at 4:09 p. m., a car operated by Laura Hughes Beckley, 15 Fourth ave., drifted into a parked car owned by Frank Fadale, 707 Fourth ave. A small amount of damage was done to both of the cars and no injuries resulted.

PINE AND PENN. AGAIN. Another accident occurred at the corner of Pine st. and Pennsylvania ave. involving vehicles operated by Patricia Ann Bidwell (Langworthy), Yankee Bush, and Richard Todd Haskell, 102 S. Third ave., Clarion. According to the report, the Bidwell machine, which was travelling east on the avenue, was stopped in the line of traffic when it was hit from behind by the other vehicle driven by Haskell.

$150 damage resulted to the Bidwell vehicle and $350 to the Haskell auto.

REPORTS TO CENTER. J. Alan Wagar, it has been announced, has been assigned to the Warren Research Center and will take charge of studies in Forest Recreation Research--pertaining to the selection development, and management of forest recreation areas.

Mr. Wagar's last assignment with the Forest Service was in the Black Hills of South Dakota. On educational leave for the past two years, he has been working toward a Doctor of Philosophy degree at the Univ. of Michigan and is now completing his doctoral thesis.

CHEST DRIVE BEHIND. While there are still some reports to come in, the Warren Community Chest Drive is about $6,000 behind its $86,200 quota.

At the last report meeting $79,492 had been reported and it is known that at least $580 has been received since that time.

If you haven't given . . . do so now. HELP IN A GOOD CAUSE.

VETERAN'S DAY PROGRAM. William Karns, veteran's administrator in Warren County, will be the guest speaker at the annual Veteran's Day observance in Warren next Wednesday. The program will start at 11 o'clock at the Soldiers and Sailors Monument near the north end of the Hickory Street Bridge.

The American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Marine Corps League are sponsoring the observance and will participate in the program.

DON'T FORGET . . . today and Saturday are Music Boosters Tag Days in Warren. Help this organization in its cause of supporting the music program in the local school system.

Official Election Results To Be Tabulated Today

While still unofficial, the span of votes determining who will be the minority commissioner in the Warren County Court House has narrowed from 20 to 15. The Observer's tabulation early Wednesday morning indicated that the county electors had given an unofficial 6301 votes to Democrat incumbent Lewis L. Crippen and 6281 to his running mate, William Martin.

The official tally of Tuesday's election will not be made until this afternoon.

The two Republicans running for commissioner posts went in by comfortable margins. Clarence C. Akeley compiled 6927 votes and incumbent Blain Mead 6886.

Three other totals which appeared in the Observer chart of votes as received from the precincts were not the same as the court house unofficial totals. Frank Fago, the Democratic candidate for assemblyman, received 5994 rather than 6418. He was defeated by Atty. Joseph Goldstein, Democrat John Salamon acquired 6016 votes rather than 5905 as published. William E. Rice was the GOP victor in that race.

To repeat the other major winners in the county, all Republicans--Gurney Ball over Vinton Finzer for register and recorder; Warren Lowe over Robert Meleen for prothonotary; Donnell Allen, Jr., over John Imperial for sheriff.

THE GIFT OF WORDS. Teachers have discovered that those who do best in school, business and the professions have one thing in common. They know far more WORDS than the average. They can read easily, write clearly, talk fluently. The gift of words has probably helped them learn faster and have more fun ever since they entered school. They sat in the same classrooms with other pupils -- but they got more out of it. Why?

There is reason to believe that the answer lies simply in "home reading", beginning the earlier the better since it is known that many a child knows and can use 5000 words before he enters kindergarten.

Children learn words by reading or being read to. More reading is done in homes where there are books. The child of three who knows Mother Goose and Johnny Crow's Garden by heart is already learning and loving it.

Reading aloud to the pre-school and primary grade child is one of the most effective ways by which a parent can help with his child's reading. The child learns where the story begins, how to turn pages, how to get meaning from pictures, how to read from left to right, and how to follow the sequence of events that brings suspense to the simplest of stories. Woe betide the adult who makes a slip in reading a familiar story!

Surrounding the child with books at home will increase his interest in reading. Without attractive reading material, many a child turns to comic books and TV as his favorite entertainment. Usually he has never had a comparable array of books from which to select. Access to an interesting book should be as easy as access to an interesting TV program.

Parents can help provide this extensive reading fare by patronizing the public library. The school library or the classroom library are other excellent sources of books and information about children's reading. Often the teacher can go one step further because she is able to suggest books that relate directly to classroom projects and interests.

Borrowed books are just right for some kinds of reading. But a child needs books to call his own, and to go back to again and again. They will make reading seem a more intimate part of his life, and with books of his own around him he is more likely to read and reread. A small bookrack on a child's bureau will give a fixed place for his first books of Mother Goose and nursery stories. Later, bricks and boards can make a convenient bookcase for his expanding library.

Most important; nothing encourages a person to read as much as the vivid, first-hand recommendation of others who love reading. The influence of the parent is greater if he enjoys reading himself. And if parents themselves read, they are demonstrating to children that reading gives continuing satisfaction. With such an example in the home, youngsters soon begin to make reading pleasure a lifetime pleasure.

The authors would like to remind you to watch for our list of good books by reliable authors for children of age 3 through 5.

Van Doren Discharge Explained By N. B. C.

On the basis of disclosures the company received for the first time Monday through his testimony before the House Sub-committee on Legislative Oversight, the National Broadcasting Company has decided to terminate its employment contract with Charles Van Doren.

Mr. Van Doren's admissions in his testimony are completely at variance with his repeated denials of complicity in or knowledge of any rigging on "Twenty-One" -- denials made to the press, to the New York County District Attorney, to the Grand Jury, to the viewing public and to his employers at NBC.

He made these denials to NBC up to and including the conferences on October 6 and 8, 1959, leading to the network's decision to relieve him of his work assignments pending final determination of the Congressional investigation.

NBC called Mr. Van Doren and his attorney to the first of these meetings and informed them that his implication in Herbert Stempel's public testimony required that he demand an opportunity immediately to testify fully before the House Subcommittee. He was told that he would be suspended unless he did so. As a result, Mr. Van Doren sent the Subcommittee a telegram, prepared by his attorney, offering to testify if he was called, and citing his own denials -- repeated that night to NBC -- that he had received any questions or answers in advance.

On October 7, Chairman Oren Harris sent Mr. Van Doren a telegram inviting him to testify. On October 8, after it became plain to NBC that Mr. Van Doren was not responding to the invitation from the Subcommittee, the network acted to relieve him.

This decision was prompted not only by his conduct in the face of the Congressional inquiry but by consideration of certain admissions he made for the first time to NBC on October 6. He admitted then to James A. Stabile, Vice President, Talent and Program Contract Administration, and David Levy, Vice President, Television Programs and Talent, that he had received an offer of help and a request for money from the producer of "Twenty-One." At the same time, he declared that he had not accepted the offer or granted the request, and reiterated that he had never received any help on the program. Moreover, when NBC requested and urged him at the conference of October 8 to give the network any knowledge he might have of dishonesty on "Twenty-One," Mr. Van Doren declined to reply on his attorney's advice.

In the light of the facts that have now emerged, it is clear that Mr. Van Doren abused the confidence of the viewing public as a performer on NBC as well as a "Twenty-One" contestant. As an example, more than a year ago, after the start of the New York District Attorney's investigation, Mr. Van Doren prepared a statement and requested permission to read it on the "Today" show. That permission was granted and he said to the NBC audience:

"I believe in the honesty of the contestants on that program ('Twenty-One') whom I know. Some of these contestants I have known only via the television screen, some I have met personally. I also believe in the honesty of the questions used on that program. I myself was never given any answers or told any questions beforehand. And as far as I know, none of the contestants received any coaching of this sort."

This statement is typical of the repeated assurances through which Mr. Van Doren masked his participation in the rigging. On this record, we feel we cannot continue to present him over our facilities as a representative of NBC.

While we recognize and appreciate Mr. Van Doren's many fine contributions to television in his appearances on the "Today" program and various educational programs, we do not feel we can have two sets of standards. Those who have knowingly engaged in the fraud of quiz show rigging must be removed from the broadcasting scene. With deep regret, we have concluded that no exception should be made with Mr. Van Doren.

SO, YOU WANT TO WRITE

And a book, maybe? If so you should read the October 24 issue of The Nation, Page 254, "On the Art of Book Publishing".

We have unveiled on these pages the vanity publishers. These are what some call the subsidized publishers, because the author pays the bill. He is promised a handsome forty per cent of the retail price after a specified number are sold. Obviously this price is too high to be real and the publisher is not very confident that the demand for the book will pass the number for which the author is paying.

They have been called the vanity publishers because they gush in large adjectives over your work and assure you that they certainly do want to publish it. And they do . . . if you will pay the printing bill.

There are some other types of publishers, too. One is the government printing office. This serves a very definite purpose. Much that is published by the government never would be provided otherwise because it would not offer a good gamble for the publisher. Much informative literature is available here, though most citizens do not realize it.

There also are the university and denominational presses. Again we have subsidy. It may be provided by the author, but it also may come from endowments or from an organization. This can consist very heavily of books the doctoral candidates are compelled to write, or the propaganda of organizations, including the religious groups.

The one the average author must lean on most heavily is the commercial publisher. And he is just that. He publishes to make money.

This limits him very much in his selection of stories and authors. He likes to minimize his chances of loss.

The author is fortunate if he receives ten per cent of the retail price and from this he must cover his expenses. The publisher also nets about ten per cent, but he already has removed his costs.

The commercial publisher's only interest in perpetuating old books is the existence of their plates which makes their publishing economical. It is the only factor involved that saves many from being out of print.

The author finds himself competing with two powerful foes. The existing plates of a successful book and the "name" writers whose new books will sell a certain amount even if they don't measure up to previous efforts. And few writers can live off the ten per cent.

The author if the article comes up with some solutions to our publishing distortions that are intriguing, such as the suggestion that coöperatives be formed so that the participants have something to say about what is to be published and read. They become publishers and book club members with a voice in the results.

It is an article worthy of your study, whether you hope to reach the heights of authorship or enjoy the pleasure of having the best possible reading material available for your personal library.

SELLING A NAME

The commercial publisher rarely gambles on an unknown author because of the obvious economic risk involved. Once an author has become established he is a fairly safe bet. This reviewer may stand alone, but we believe this factor is largely responsible (or to blame) for Robert Penn Warren's latest novel "The Cave" being near the top of the current best-seller list.

"The Cave" is Warren's sixth novel. His "All the King's Men" in 1946 won the Pulitzer Prize. He has also published a short-story collection, a collection of critical writings and four volumes of poetry, the most recent being "Promises" which, in 1958, won the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize. With such an auspicious record, no publisher need fear that any work of Robert Penn Warren could fail to sell.

"The Cave" is selling and being widely read, but we wonder how many others feel, as we do, that they have been taken in on this one. And aided in the process by friendly reviewers such as one in a popular weekly magazine which hailed it as "Warren's finest novel. With it, Warren, twice a winner of the Pulitzer Prize, makes it seem clear that his niche will be way up there with Faulkner's and Hawthorne's and Melville's."

A reviewer usually has a set formula which guides his judgment in assessing a literary effort. "The Cave" failed to attain a very high rating in any of this reader's list of requirements and the clincher comes in our regret of the time spent reading it.

The dramatic potential, which characterizes Warren's previous efforts, is present in this story set in Johtown, Tennessee, in the 1950's. A young man entombed in a cave becomes the magic catalyst by which the lives and characters of the main characters are transformed.

Influenced perhaps by a quotation from Plato's The Republic, Warren attempts to use the youth trapped beneath the earth as an instrument for much soul-searching on the part of characters. In contemplating his precarious situation they are led to face the symbolic cave in their own lives and beings. Supposedly, they become acquainted with their real selves. The author leads them through a maze of "being and non-being" to the ultimate triumph in which they become reconciled to themselves and each other.

This reviewer's chief criticism, aside from the naughty language and the unsubtle, erotic scufflings, is that Warren doesn't seem to quite accomplish his aim. There is the feeling, on the part of this reader, that the changes effected in the lives and characters of the principals, because of the cave incident, are only temporary; that, if the author had added a few more chapters and given his characters time to recover from the impact of the tragedy they would have reacted as most real-life characters do . . . revert to type.

The first part of the novel uses the flashback technique to reveal the past lives of those closest to the young man in the cave: his father, Old Jack, once known up and down the valley as "Hell's own high-stepper" but now old and dying of cancer; his mother, who, as a young schoolteacher, had fallen in love with and married Old Jack, twice her age; his young brother Monty, and Monty's teen-age sweetheart, Jo-Lea; the latter's father, a local banker, and her above-reproach mother; the Rev. Sumpter, in his youth the side-kick of Old Jack but now reformed and turned preacher; his son, Isaac, doomed (we suspect) to a lifetime of neuroticism; the Greek restaurant owner "Nick Papp" whose wife, a former striptease artist, is for him the reincarnation of Jean Harlow; and Dorothy Cutlick whose presence in the story is for the sole purpose of providing l'amour for Nick and the banker.

The tempo of the story is accelerated in the middle of the book when it becomes known that Jasper is truly trapped in the cave: the entire countryside gathers around; reporters, radio and TV men take over in a telling satire on our mass media; hillbilly ballad singers plunk their guitars; and the pages reek with earthy conversation.

In the last two chapters, everyone seems to find himself and to know himself at last; the future is faced with high resolve but the values settled for appear somewhat commonplace after all the psychological meanderings.

Maybe Mr. Warren will emerge from his cave and write us another story worthy of his past reputation. This is the way we feel about "The Cave." But every reader is his own best reviewer.

FINE NETWORK SHOWS NOT CARRIED LOCALLY

Televiewers in this area are being deprived of many splendid network shows and will probably continue to be half-starved unless demands are made upon the stations serving this region.

For instance, CBS has a fine religious series titled "Look Up and Live" Sunday mornings at 10:30, at which time WBEN, the area's CBS station, presents a children's talent show called "Uncle Jerry's Club"

(shouldn't youngsters be in Sunday School and church at this hour?) The religious program mentioned above is beginning a series Sunday tracing the history of the Roman Catholic Church in America from pre-Colonial days to the present. Other series deal with phases of the other religious faiths.

NBC also has the Eternal Light and Frontiers of Faith series on Sunday mornings but neither is carried by WJAC, WGR or WICU.

This is not to say that local area stations do not present any religious programs on Sunday mornings. WBEN has ninety minutes, WJAC has two hours, WGR ninety minutes, WICU one hour, and WKBW two hours and a half.

Considering the type of programming offered during the remainder of the morning schedule, it seems as though some room might be allotted to the best network services. But this won't be done unless the public demands it.

In the same vein, CBS has an excellent public affairs program "Face the Nation" which WBEN has carried sporadically but has now ditched in favor of a bowling series. The latter is not condemned but we believe WBEN would be doing a greater service to the public if Face the Nation were carried at the specified network hour and the bowling series scheduled for some other time. For instance, Sunday Face the Nation has a panel of experts interviewing Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, who is a presidential aspirant for 1960. Surely the public needs to become better acquainted with all candidates for high offices as well as those who are now serving in government. Face the Nation does much to accomplish this purpose in its interviews with people in public life.

NEW USE FOR TV

The surgery department of the University of Melbourne has announced the development of the first television camera small enough to be swallowed for diagnostic purposes. What will the small screen show next?

FM GROWS

The WQXR-FM radio network is extending its service coverage to reach from Boston to Washington and from New York to Buffalo and Jamestown, effective Nov. 1.

WJTN-FM of Jamestown is affiliated with the network and some quality programs should now be available to FM listeners in this area.

Music lovers who are nauseated by the usual Saturday evening TV fare should tune into a good CBS radio station to hear Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic. The concerts will be broadcast from Carnegie Hall in New York City every Saturday night at 8:35 through May 14.

POWER INCREASE

WKBW-TV, Channel 7 went on the air this morning, November 6, with an increase to 100,000 watts. Along with the power increase, WKBW-TV, now has the highest tower in Western New York, with the tower standing 2,840 ft. above sea level at Colden, New York.

The increase in power is both in sound (60 kilo watts audio) and visual (100 kilo watts video). Because of the power increase, WKBW-TV, Channel 7 was off the air from 7:30 to 8:00 a.m., Sunday, October 25, and Thursday, October 29, from 7:30 to 10:28, while the transmitter adjustments were being made for the increase.

CHANNEL CHATTER

BOURBON STREET BEAT and RIVERBOAT are not enjoying the audience attention expected of them. P. Lorillard is withdrawing sponsorship of the first mentioned, as of Jan. 4. Riverboat, sponsored by Corn Products, is proving a mite too corny. On the other hand, Robert Taylor's Detectives and The Rebel, both ABC, are doing much better than anticipated.

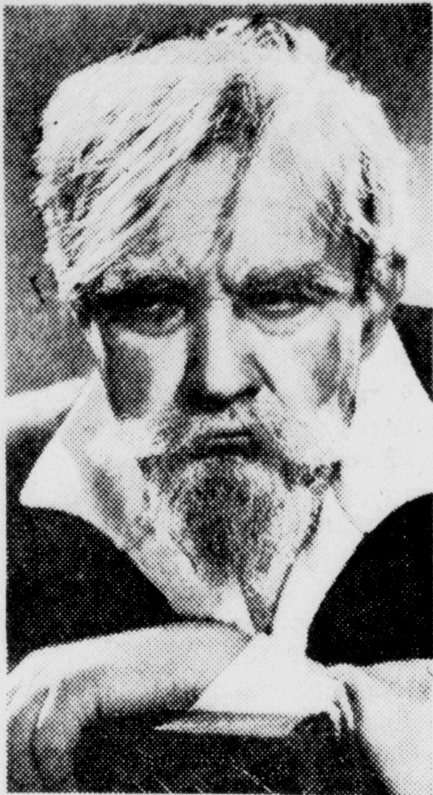

BURGESS MEREDITH will have the role of Eli Whitney in the Nov. 22 program in the "Our American Heritage" series titled "The Practical Dreamer."

GEORGE BURNS, Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor and George Jessel will be featured in Ford Startime's Nov. 17 show titled "George Burns and The Big Time."

JOHN CROSBY, the Observer's syndicated television critic, will narrate the CBS spoof on the television industry "Make Mine TV", starring Sid Caesar. This one-hour show will be seen early in 1960.

ED WYNNE (as Kris Kringle), Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy will star in "The Miracle on 34th Street" on NBC Friday, Nov. 27. This is a television adaptation of the 1947 Academy Award-winning motion picture.

ETHEL MERMAN will be joined by Tab Hunter, Fess Parker and Tom Preston in the Ford Startime's musical salute to her career

LEE J. COBB stars in the dual role of Miguel de Cervantes, the celebrated Spanish author, and Don Quixote, Cervantes' famed literary creation, in a 90-minute production of "I, Don Quixote," on CBS Television's Du Pont Show of the Month Monday night, Nov. 9, at 9:30 over WBEN-TV. The special was written for television by Dale Wasserman after four months of research in Spain, the locale of Don Quixote's famous windmill-tilting adventures. Eli Wallach co-stars as the faithful servant, Sancho Panza, and Viveca Lindfors will portray Aldonza, the barmaid who is transformed into an attractive maiden by Quixote's imagination.

in "Merman on Broadway" Dec. 1.

KATE SMITH, Claude Rains and Charles Ruggles will have leading roles in Paul Gallico's holiday fable "Once Upon A Christmas Time", NBC, Wednesday, Dec. 9.

DAVID BRINKLEY will narrate "Politics 1960" on the NBC network Sunday, Nov. 15, from 7 to 7:30 p.m. The special program focuses on presidential aspirants, party platforms and political trends. A nation-wide poll was conducted as a basis for the study.

Television and Radio

By John Crosby

HARDLY A DENT?

In twenty-five years in this business, I have never seen such an organized cover-up as is still going--unsuccessfully, I must admit--in the quiz scandal.

I wasn't around during the Teapot Dome investigation but it must have been the same thing. When they blow, they sure blow--but the broadcaster just will not see the signs.

First, there was the effort to hush the whole thing up during the grand jury investigation. This culminated in the successful effort to get Judge Schweitzer to suppress the grand jury presentment. Never in the ninety-year recorded history of the grand jury system in New York County has a presentment been suppressed (only one was expunged after being made public).

This was the silliest thing the broadcasters could have done. The presentment would have been a three-day wonder and that would have been that. Suppressed, it drew the attention of Congress who got--not just the presentment which mentioned no names--but the testimony which told everything, names and all. Still, the effort to suppress went on. In Washington, Congressman Oren Harris announced one day that his committee's investigation would end the next day.

That provoked an inquiry from "The New York Herald Tribune" whether there wasn't just as much evidence of rigging of "$64,000 Question" as of "Twenty-One" and the admission that there was evidence of rigging on that quiz and its brother "$64,000 Challenge." The next day the granddaddy of all the big money quizzes landed on the front pages from which it had been carefully shielded up to that point. Why? The supposition is that no one--even NBC, the competing network--wanted to start a scandal over a quiz that had been owned by the president of a network, and "$64,000 Question" had been the brain child of Louis Cowan, president of the CBS television network.

Television's popular image had received a severe kick in the pants and the question was how to repair it. The forthright and honest answer was Dr. Frank Stanton's--a public admission that television had been wrong and a purge of the malpractices. The other method--and it is being actively pursued--is to pretend that nothing has really happened, that the whole thing is a tempest in a teapot, and what's the fuss all about.

Publicists are pushing this idea--After all, we are only kidding and what harm has been done?--with a remarkable degree of success. Yesterday "Broadcasting" magazine, a consistent apologist for the industry, published a survey of public opinion happily headlined: "Hardly a Scratch in TV's Image." "The waves of publicity generated by the television quiz investigation have had little effect on the public enjoyment and opinion of TV," says the lead sentence, leading to the suspicion the whole thing is a plot on the part of the newspapers to kick their rival around. Viewers think the quiz investigations are "silly" and "ridiculous," reports the story.

Now it has been my experience--in fact, you may set it down as Crosby's Law--that every survey tells the guy who pays for it what he wants to hear. But even with that in mind, this survey doesn't even begin to bear out the story "Broadcasting" wrote about it. For instance, in the small type, you discover that 46,000,000 people are in FAVOR of the quiz investigation. That hardly bears out "Broadcasting's" conclusion that people think the investigation is a waste of the taxpayer's money (another idea the publicists have been assiduously trying to plant).

In another part of the survey headed "And many people hated to see them go," you learn that 32,000,000 people thought it was a good idea kicking the quizzes off the air. Hardly a dent in the public image? Thirty-two million disgruntled viewers make quite a dent. (Actually, there were many more disgusted viewers concealed under a heading "conditional.")

Let's be sensible. There are many people who think the furore over the quizzes has gone way beyond the bounds of reason--but then these same people never got very excited about Charles Van Doren's winning all that money in the first place. The people most deeply disappointed in the quiz rigging are those who made "Twenty-One" a popular show.

You can't have it both ways. The people who think the quiz investigations are a lot of nonsense are the same ones who think television is largely malarky anyhow. The viewers who are shocked are those who take TV seriously--and it is with the opinion of those people that television should most actively concern itself.

Television can't revel in the popularity of its heroes one moment and the next minute dismiss them as of no importance.

Special Education Week Programs

The American Education Week Committee has arranged for the following program commemorating American Education Week in War-

Monday, November 9, preceding regular meeting at the Woman's Club, there will be a five-minute presentation by Mrs. John Fanaritis. Her topic will be "The New Elementary School Program" -- this is in keeping with this year's general theme "Praise and Appraise Your Schools".

On November 9th, there will also be a five-minute discussion by John Fowler on "Education Week", at the Rotary luncheon in the YWCA. Wednesday, Nov. 11, a panel consisting of a parent, teacher and student will conduct a discussion pertinent to the week's chosen theme at the Kiwanis luncheon in the YWCA. The panelists are Mrs. John Fanaritis, Mr. Robert Fey, and Dr. Lee J. Borger will be the participants.

Also Wednesday there will be a nine-minute panel giving a ten-minute course relative to "Praise and Appraise Your Schools". The members of this panel will be a student, Mrs. Werner; a teacher, Mrs. Paul Werner; and a parent, Mrs. John Fanaritis. They will speak immediately preceding the College Club meeting at Mrs. Lloyd Cleveland's home, 15 Cleveland Circle.

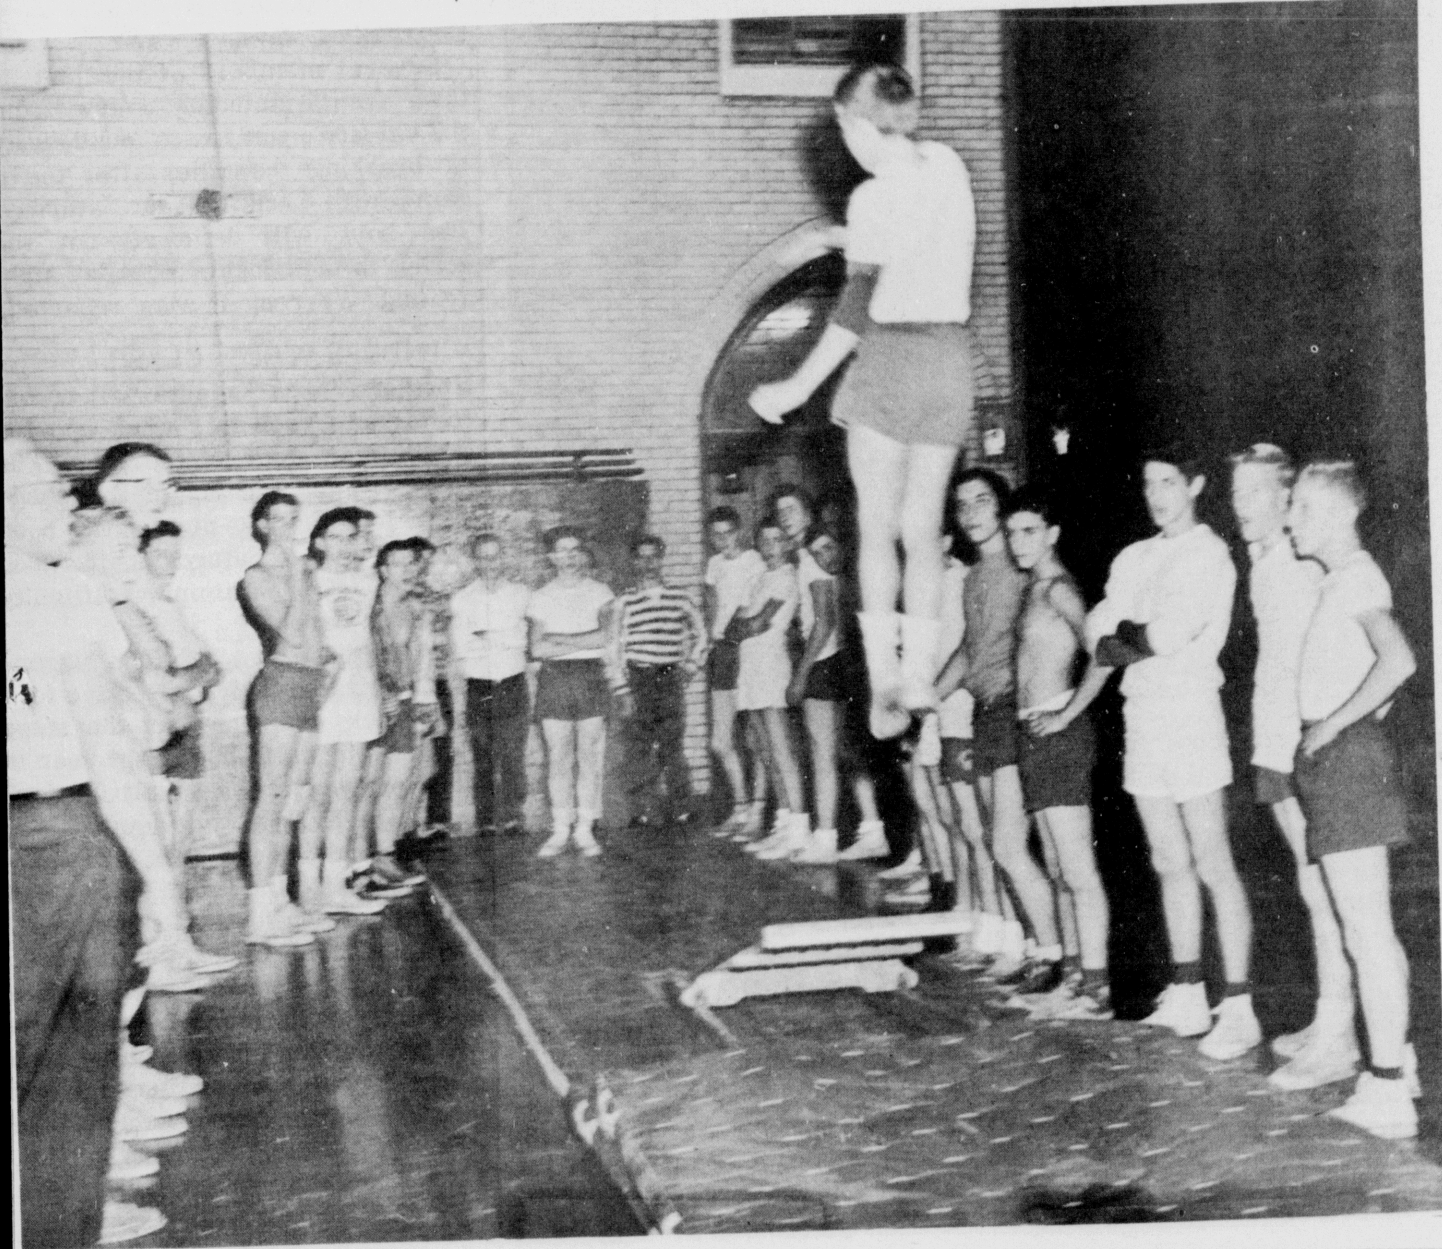

On Friday, November 13, there will be a public demonstration of the English Class, actually being conducted. This will be at 7 p. m. in the Second ave. window of Levin Brothers. Mr. Richard Anderson will be the teacher and the class will be audible to those "outside the looking glass" by means of a loud speaker hook-up.

PRACTICE, PRACTICE. Carroll Fowler leads his ninth grade chorus as they attempt to sing a new French song. The group had a hard time pronouncing some of the words but, with a few more sessions and a director like Mr. Fowler, we're sure they are going to learn it thoroughly. A little more nasal quality, please.

MAYBE A FUTURE. Mr. Kristy's eighth grade wood shop boys are diligently at work on their projects for the semester. The boys learn the use of various wood-working implements and are taught shop safety by the capable instructors. Many beautiful and useful works of handicraft have been produced in this shop by these youngsters.

"GET UP THERE", screams Coach Hutchings as he encourages one of his gym class boys to take advantage of the springboard to execute a maneuver. The Beaty gym classes have the opportunity to participate in a wide variety of sports including tumbling, rope-climbing, volleyball, torpedo ball, etc.

BOWLING

IN SKIRTS

A 509 was posted by Arlene Hariger in the Ladies' Major League Wednesday night, while Flo Albaugh rolled 502 and Addie Okruh a 499. Joyce Wingard led Pegs with 462 and Julie Endress recorded a 463 in the Ladies' Minor.

LAST NIGHT

John Clark had 251-610 and Jack Kifer hit 607 to lead the Commercial. John Smith paced the Merchants with 249-584.

HIGH AVERAGES

Leading the league averages at the Penn seems to be a Pete Juliano habit. He tops the Men's City with 198, the Industrial with 198, and the Commercial with 199. His position is safely protected by an oversized toe that has sidelined him following the dropping of a bowling ball by "friends".

Bob Saporito and Paul Coppola have 190 in the Men's City, Mike Bleech had 189 in the Industrial, Bob Check has 186 and Lou Vescio 185 in the Commercial, Chuck Halle leads the Jr. Industrial with 178, and Bob Hedberg the Merchants with 178, followed by Bob Sandrock's 176.

Brief

IN THE COLLEGES. Named to the violin section of the Allegheny College Sinfonietta, a 35-piece orchestra, was Gale Scholes. A former Warren high school student, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Addison B. Scholes, 17 N. Irvine st., Warren.

Stanley W. Lindberg, Warren, has been elected president of the junior class at Dickinson College. An English major at the school, he is vice president of the Student Senate and a freshman counselor. He is also an honor student, member of Kappa Sigma fraternity and the varsity wrestling team.

MEN IN SERVICE. Arden V. Carlson, seaman, USN, is now serving aboard the heavy cruiser USS Rochester which this week is participating in a large fleet training exercise off the coast of Southern California.

The sailor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold O. Carlson, Sugar Grove.

Area Sports

OFF TO JIMTOWN

The Dragons will ring down the curtain this Saturday night as they pack their bags and travel to Jamestown for the annual Warren-Jamestown classic. The age-old rivalry always promises the most thrilling of football action and this year will prove to be no different.

Warren goes into the battle with a 4-3 record, not overly impressive for a Warren team, and the Red Raiders enter the skirmish with similar mark, having been the victims of their last two foes. The Jimtowners have recorded victories over some rough ball clubs, but at times have also looked a bit shoddy. Warren coach Ralph Veights has seen the Jamestowners in action and looks with considerable esteem at the Red Raiders' bench strength.

This will be the final high school game for about 20 of Warren's 34 man squad. The seniors have contributed much to the success of this year's team. Coach Veights says the team is in good shape and ready to go. The Dragons will hold a light workout today to loosen up and keep their eyes sharpened.

TEN BOYS SUSPENDED

A grim reminder to all young high school students participating in athletics who think that breaking training rules is the thing to do, comes this word from Jamestown.

Ten members of the JHS football team have been released from the squad for infraction of the rules. Just 72 hours away from the traditional inter-state clash between Warren and Jamestown Walt Colburn, Red Raider mentor, announces the shaking news.

Several members of the Jamestown team, including a few from the varsity squad, were found guilty of breaking the rules after their game with Dunkirk last Saturday. The boys will definitely not see action in the tilt this Saturday night against Warren, it was reported.

UNDEFEATEDS CLASH. The Northern Area Knights will travel to Silver Creek this week end for their final game of the year. The game, which was originally scheduled for Friday night, has been moved up to Saturday afternoon because of programming difficulty at Silver Creek.

When these two gridiron juggernauts defeated their respective foes last week end, they set the stage for the biggest battle of the year in the Northwestern Football Conference. The Knights, who downed Casadaga, and Silver Creek, who whipped Bemus Point, both sport clean slates in seven football skirmishes.

NA and Silver Creek were involved in last year's three way tie for the league title and this year both teams will be shooting for sole possession of the laurels. A very large crowd is expected to be on hand for the kick off.

TURKEY AND HAM SHOOT

The Tidioute Bucktails are holding a Turkey and Ham Shoot at their range on Bucktown Hill starting at 10 a.m. Sunday, November 8. The public is invited to participate.

WHERE THERE'S A WILL

That was the title of the article which appeared in the Nov. 2 issue of Sports Illustrated concerning the undefeated Northern Area football team. Douglas Smith, of Jamestown, who was apparently aroused by an earlier article published by the magazine, wrote to the editor about the NA squad and expressed his opinion of "The Little Miracle of Northern Area". Smith relates in the story the long road NA has had to climb to sport an undefeated team in 1959.

Congratulations, Smitty; and Good Luck Knights.

Halloween Party

The annual JayCee Halloween festival was held last Saturday night at the Spot but due to the inclement weather conditions the festivities had to be abbreviated. The parade was cancelled but witches and what-nots turned out in fine style for the judging. A good crowd was on hand for the judging at the Spot and the affair was labeled as another success. Judges for the event were Blain Mead, Bill Rice, Margie Wilson and Ed Lowrey.

Winners in the pre-school bracket were Martha MacLaren, David MacLaren, Linda Wilcox, Ricky Gustafson, Billy Vargini, and JaySchneck.

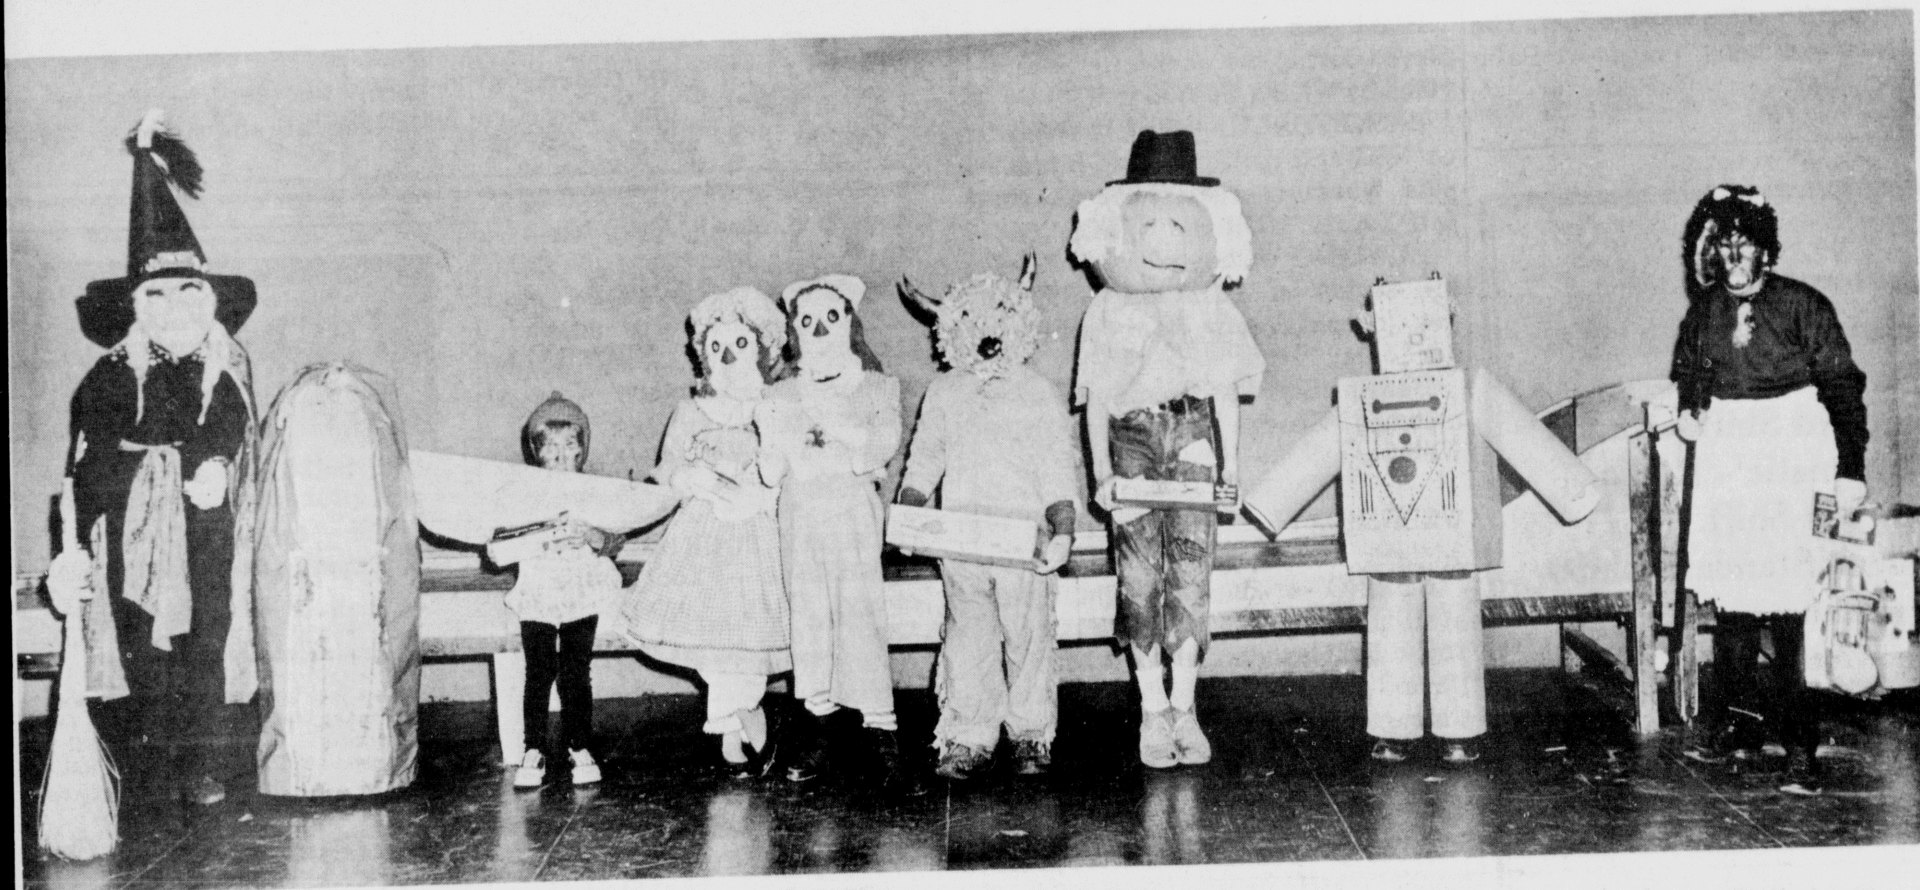

The grammar school winners were Rocky Logan, James Crozier, Jack Baker, Christine Hodas, Denny Clark, Debbie Clark, Timmy Caple, Jim Diegan, and Barbara Baker.

In the high school group John DePierro, Jane Foreman, Jan Schneck, Tom O'Donnell, Denny O'Donnell, and Denny Bimber captured the honors.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ayars and their children, Mike and Jeanine, Beatrice Wilcox, and Martha Green won the laurels in the adult age bracket.

Throughout the course of the entire program cider, ice cream suckers, and candy were available to the persons present. Leroy Schneck was at the mike to aid the judges while the contestants filed pass.

Al Snyder, John Evans, and Chuck Williams were a few of the men who were instrumental in making the evening such a success.

SIDES

STAND CORRECTED

Not long ago we mentioned that radio is not as restricted in its retelling of lottery and contests as is the case with newspapers. The postal clamp down on the papers in some areas, including Warren. In many towns there is nothing done out the press carrying reports of go games, lotteries of various kinds, and other games, but only because some postal officials ignore the law. But it seems that radio also is subject to strict rules against mentioning lotteries. Rules of the FCC have included a ban on broadcasting of lottery information since 1954. And they have been upheld by the Supreme Court. While newspapers are fined for such violations, the radio station may lose its license to operate. It isn't worth the chance.

Down in the blue grass country a newspaper was threatened by local promoters who wanted to advertise a lottery. If the paper wouldn't go along by winking at the law the advertisers said they would give their business to the radio. The paper refused to publish news about the lottery and asked the National Editorial Association for advice. The pertinent FCC rule was supplied as follows:

"An application for construction permit, license, renewal of license, or any other authorization for the operation of a broadcast station will not be granted where the applicant proposes to follow or continue to follow a policy or practice of broadcasting or permitting the broadcasting of, any advertisement of or information concerning any lottery, gift enterprise, or similar scheme, offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance, or any list of the prizes drawn or awarded by means of any such lottery, gift enterprise, or scheme, whether said list contains any part or all of such prizes."

"The determination whether a particular program comes within the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section depends on the facts of each case. However, the Commission will in any event consider that a program comes within the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section if in connection with such program a prize consisting of money or thing of value is awarded to any person whose selection is dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance, if as a condition of winning or competing for such prize, such winner or winners are required to furnish any money or thing of value or are required to have in their possession any product sold, manufactured, furnished or distributed by a sponsor of a program broadcast on the station in question."

The difference is that the postal officials are considerate enough to issue advisory rulings in advance. The FCC waits for a complaint to be filed and then . . . bingo!

DISCRIMINATION CLAIMED

The inland waterway interests are fighting a bill which they claim will prove costly to the nation by giving the railroads control of all heavy transportation. This legislation would place the waterway facilities in the hands of the railroads.

If this is true, obviously the rates in some areas would change. It has been revealed many times that water transportation often forces the railroads to lower their rates in the areas where such service competes. But it also is claimed that they make up for it by charging high rates where water craft is not available.

All of this publicity must be very confusing to the public which has been handed reams of publicity by the river transportation boys to the effect that water transportation does not harm the railroads. It has been argued that it actually makes more business for them. If this is so why do they lower their rates to a point of loss?

There are answers to all of these maneuvers and statements, and it is not our intention to unmask either side. We have a financial investment in both systems, as a look at history and the books will tell you. And both will be a powerful force in our transportation of the future. We see no reason for laws which will give either an advantage.

Here, again, we have need for a controlling policy, and we believe that if we are to compete with strong centralized governments we, too, must have centralized control, and perhaps we need a transportation seat in our cabinet. The difference in our system, of course, is that the people control the system. If they will.

ONE LITTLE PRICK

The archery season for deer has ended and finally it happened, but only once. A hunter shot a hunter with an arrow. But he's all sewed up and all well, again.

The casualty list for the deer is not in. Obviously many hunters have failed to abide by the law which says they must report their kill within five days following the end of the season. The latest count when this was written was less than 700, but most officials expect the total to top last year's 1,358.

WANT SOME DEDUCTIONS?

If you want a list of 105 business and individual income tax deductions for 1960 you can have it for twenty-five cents, says the National Society of Tax Consultants, Inc. They sell the list, but if they want to do business perhaps they should pay for the free publicity, including their address.

POLY, POLY, DOCEC

Hair-raising music will be played next week end in a pair of concerts by the Pittsburgh Symphony orchestra. The most played composer in Europe, Luigi Nono, will be premiered when the orchestra does his "Due espressioni per orchestra".

In case you don't know what the erudite in music call a hair-raiser, it is a description of polyrhythmic, polytonal, or docecaponic music. We, of the lay mob, would call it modern. The concerts are at 8:40 Friday evening, and 3:10 Sunday afternoon, in the Syria Mosque.

Endowed TV Is Proposed

By Inez Robb

Dreams, fortunately, are free, and -- as far as I know -- no one has ever been able to rig them by means other than a Welsh rabbit. (Although, in view of psychococus-pocus, I may merely be revealing my innocence. Or, worse yet, my ignorance.)

But to the point: recently the press's premier pundit, Walter Lippmann, wrote a powerful column on the current teevee scandals and dreamed aloud of a cure for the grievous ills to which the medium has permitted itself to be heir.

Mr. Lippmann dreamed of "one network (which) can be run as a public service with its criterion not what will be most popular but good." He dreamed further of a network that would not be attractive to the largest mass audience but to an influential one.

"The force of a good example is a great force and should not be underrated," he continued, describing teevee as "a mighty instrument of education for good or evil," as we all know it to be.

The columnist faces the hard fact that such a network could come into being and exist only through subsidization and endowment by pointing out that universities, public schools, space exploration, medical research and even churches, "which cannot be run for profit," exist because of endowment and subsidy.

This is a noble dream of Mr. Lippmann's. But it is one, I'll guarantee, that will be fought tooth and nail by the teevee industry itself just as it has fought, connived and lobbied against even a trial run for pay teevee. So far the industry has successfully stymied the Federal Communications Commissions, itself touched with scandal, in an experimental period for pay television. Even if some of the Borbdingnag foundations got together to endow and subsidize such a network as Mr. Lippmann envisions, what would be their chances of getting a prime channel? If the teevee industry organized its power, muscles and money to fend off pay teevee, imagine what it would do to prevent a pilot network that would show it up in all its fifth-rate shoddy.

Occasionally some sop is tossed the teevee public with a splendid program, such as Edward R. Murrow on "Missiles" and Sir Laurence Olivier in "The Moon and Sixpence." But by and large, with the exception of news broadcasts, the teevee fare ground out day by day is calculated to make anyone with a high-school education frow up.

There occurs daily, with a deadly monotony, a teevee specialty that I find far more dangerous than the current exposures of rigged teevee shows. And that is teevee's moronic devotion to violence in any form.

It is one woman's opinion that this grinding, hour-by-hour glorification of the most low and vulgar forms of violence is far more damaging to public morality and much more contributory to juvenile delinquency than all the quiz-show dishonesty multiplied by 100. And I don't want to exempt the movies from this indictment, either.

Who can doubt that television's potential as a revolutionary education instrument is second only to the invention of the printing press? But who can doubt, either, that the potential has been subverted to means largely ignoble?

Mr. Lippmann dreams of a subsidized, endowed network that would guide and goad commercial teevee into better ways. I dream of a pay teevee network that would do the same thing. But I think we are both jinxed by the teevee lobby. Only an aroused public can lick this particular city hall.
